

From the Editor-in- Chief's desk

As the editor-in-chief of this very esteemed journal, it is both an honour and responsibility to welcome our readers to this new edition of Global Review of Library and Information Science (GRELIS). This journal has been a great platform for advancing scholarship, fostering dialogue and pushing the boundaries of what is possible in the Library and Information Science (LIS) field.

GRELIS is committed to upholding the highest standards of academic rigor whilst also embracing diverse perspectives as can be seen by our varied and interesting titles. These titles span the whole gamut of the LIS discipline from open science to climate change to block chain technology, to gender studies and other trending topics such as Open AI, and its use for scholarship.

It is with great anticipation that we move forward together knowing that research and ideas shared in this journal will continue to impact our esteemed profession. It is through the dedication and expertise of our contributors that we continue to build a robust understanding of the evolving landscape in the LIS profession. I therefore, thank all our contributors for keeping this journal alive and for helping us keep our word on timely publications. Thank you.

Prof. C.N Ezeani

Head, Department of Library and Information Science

The University of Nigeria, Nsukka